

Renewal of the structural geology Chair

The structural geology Chair attributed to Jean-Paul Callot in 2011 helped formalize the strong cooperation between university research at the LFCR and Total's research groups in the field of geosciences. After five years of success during which 11 theses, 13 post-doctoral projects and about 20 one-off specialist actions were achieved, the Chair has just been renewed until 2023. "The experiment proved that a strong bond between a dynamic research team and an industrial partner intent on promoting scientific exchanges is an ideal framework for research; this model should continue to grow, in particular as part of the E2S UPPA project," says Jean-Paul Callot.
